My relationship with Community College of Vermont (CCV in St. Albans) has been valuable and a meaningful one.

Before coming to CCV I did a semester at Johnson State College. I felt like a number that the teachers didn't care but here at CCV I don't feel like a number that I can go to any of the teachers or my advisor and talk to them about anything.

Sometimes I am not sure if the path that I am on for my degree is one that I really want to do but with Candice my advisor she is helping me figure out which way I can go. Originally I wanted to go for Business and then after the first semester here I decided to go with digital marketing.

As I walk thru the door of CCV and have the smiling face of Becky and saying good morning to going into class and find the teachers have fabulous knowledge and experience. The teachers make it easy to ask questions and they give you great feedback. I am very insecure of myself but find it helps my self-esteem when I can ask a question and I don't feel put down by the instructor. It makes the day a lot better when life is going in a positive path.

I am so glad I made the decision to come to CCV here in St. Albans.
